At an apartment construction site, these framers were apparently too good to climb the ladders like all the ordinary workers. So, they hopped on the forklift express to be transported to the roof in style. Guess they figured safety rules didn't apply to them. Their employers didn't see it that way. They were fired on the spot.

If you think you're above safety, think again. These workers were lucky to get away with losing their

"Would you like to fly in my beautiful forklift?"

RISK MANAGEMENT

Does the benefit outweigh the cost?

http://safetycenter.navy.mil/photo/default.htm